C3E International is proud to partner with the US Government's Power Africa Initiative in spotlighting Rwanda.

There are few places in the world where women play such a key leadership role in tackling the significant challenge of providing access to clean, reliable, and affordable energy.

Women are at the helm of some of the most innovative companies and government institutions in charge of the country's energy development.

Join the conversation as we discuss the essential role women play in ensuring Rwanda's clean energy future with leading pioneers in the field.

Patricie Uwase, Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Infrastructure, Rwanda

Francine Munyaneza, Founder and CEO of MunyaxEco

Carine Mukashyaka, Chief Operating Officer of EPC Africa

Clean Energy Education and Empowerment (C3E) International is a multilateral initiative under the Clean Energy Ministerial (CEM) & International Energy Agency (IEA) working towards greater gender diversity in clean energy professions, recognizing that the transition to a clean energy future will only succeed if we harness all possible talent.
